Paragraph 56

56. Experience with the Action Plan has demonstrated the ease of its applicability to any institution, irrespective of its mandate, including those of local and national governments. In this context, under the leadership of the Economic and Social Commission for Western Asia (ESCWA) and in partnerships with national women's machineries in the Arab States, the Action Plan was adapted to the Arab context to assist countries in the region to track and measure progress on gender equality and build accountability for it in public institutions. The first country to formally commit to rolling out the adapted Action Plan framework at the national level, as a pilot, was Jordan. To inform the development of an internal gender equality strategy, the Jordanian National Commission for Women initiated a gender audit, with the technical support of ESCWA.
